

vision of this Court according to the course and practice of chancery;—it is, therefore, ordered and decreed that it be referred to

Esq., as master, to inquire and report what would be the most expedient situation for the said building, to the end that the true intent and purpose of the testator, as contained in his will, may be carried into full effect; And that he have authority to take testimony in addition to that taken before the examiner; And that the defendant be restrained, until further order, from proceeding to erect the said building on the lot situate at the southeast corner of Broad and Christian Streets; And the Court reserves all questions of costs and expenses for its further consideration.