

A GOOD ONE FOR A LAWYER.

for the plaintiff that, having submitted the other proofs to the court, he felt that his client's interest really required no more, and he accordingly sat down without making the customary opening address to the jury. But the defendant's counsel, more ambitious of rhetorical display, and probably

HE following appeared in the Philadelphia Sunday "Transcript" a short time since under the above caption:

Roswell F—, a Vermont lawyer of distinguished ability, now residing at St. Louis, and in the first rank of the bar of Missouri, had brought a suit in court, which was really so plain a case into her 1

sides," sa
"But t
the defen
"No it
nobody b

An old
condition
"You s
as I can der mar
fader mar
parents a

"Mothe
eight sun
"Why,
"Beacu
dren's chi
"Here,
and put h

"What
said the c
in a thick
not mind
were ours

Men wh
whiskers