The above is a representation of the One Hundred Dollar Treasury Note. It is of the same size, and as close a fac-simile as can be made on wood, and at the same time be adapted to the rapid printing of our ten-cylinder press. The original note, however, is of the finest artistic finish, and in two colors, viz.: The large outline "C" behind "United States;" also the figures "$100" in tablet in each lower corner, are printed in green; the figures, lettering, portrait of General Scott, and all the coupons, are all in black ink. The name and signatures on the above are, of course, fictitious, having been put in by the wood engraver merely to show the general appearance of filling up. The back of the note is printed in green, with its amount very beautifully expressed in geometrical lattice work and figures. On one end of the back rate of interest per day, viz.: 2 cents per day on the $100 note. The public will perceive that the coupons are numbered and dated to expire every six months, and can be readily cut off and presented to the nearest branch office for payment at the times of maturity. The various denominations of treasury notes, bearing 7-8-10 per cent. interest, are now being signed at Washington, and will be issued to the public in a few days. They are as follows: $50, $100, $1,000, and $5,000. In the meanwhile, subscriptions may be received at the office of Mr. John J. Cisco, Assistant-Treasurer of the United States, No. 33 Wall street, or by any of the city banks. The $5, $10, $20 on demand notes, without interest, are already in circulation, but have not yet reached the ordinary channels of trade. The style and finish of each denomination is different, therefore the above is a representation of the $100 only. The coupons, however, are attached to all the denominations in the same manner, but the interest is specified according to the amount of the face of the note. The notes are all executed by the American Bank Note Company, and embrace the most perfect security against counterfeiting or alterations. They are also rendered anti-phlogographic by the use of a patent indelible green colored ink, of which the company have an exclusive use. The Associated Banks of New York have made arrangements so that electrolyses of the above plate may be had by all other newspapers, at the cost price of $2, upon applying to A. H. Jocelyn, 60 Fulton street, New-York.
