

great under any form of government, 98. The methods taken to people it with inhabitants, 132. Abandoned by its sovereigns, becomes independent, 196. Causes of its destruction, ibid.

Romulus and his successors always at war with their neighbours, 26. He adopts the use of the Sabin shield, ibid.
Rubicon, a river of Cisalpine Gaul, 109.

SABINES, their union with the Romans, 26. A warlike people, 33.

Salvian refutes the letter of Symmachus, 188.

Samnites, the most warlike people of all Italy, 35. Allies of Pyrrhus, 46. Auxiliaries of the Romans against the Carthaginians and Gauls, 49. Accustomed to the Roman yoke, 50.

Schism between the Latin and Greek church, 232.

School, military, of the Romans, 37.

Scipio Æmilianus, how he treats his men after the defeat near Numantia, 38.

Scipio deprives the Carthaginians of their Numidian horse, 52.

Scythia, state of that country at the time its inhabitants invaded the Roman empire, 193.

Seleucus founder of the Syrian empire, 64.

Senate, Roman, had the direction of affairs, 47. Its constant maxim, not to treat with an enemy, till they had quitted the Roman territory, 55. Its firmness after the defeat at Cannae, and singular behaviour towards Terentius Varro, ibid. Its profound policy, 69. Its behaviour with the people, 88. Its abjection, 114. After the death of Caesar confirms all the acts he had made, 117. Grants indemnity to his murderers, ibid. Its mean servitude under Tiberius; causes thereof, 135. The use Tiberius made of the senate, 148. Unable to recover its influence, 149.

Severus, the emperor, defeats Niger and Albinus, his competitors for the empire, 155. Governed by Plautian his favourite, 156. Unable to take the city of Atræ in Arabia, why, 157. Amasses immense wealth, by what means, 158. Suffers military discipline to grow remiss, 162.

Shipping of the Carthaginians excels that of the Romans, both very indifferently, 52. Improved by the invention of the sea-compass, 53.

Slingers, Balearian, formerly in highest repute, 41.