

The CONTENTS.

What Persons ought to be Jury-men, and how qualified,	248, 249
That Jurors in antient Law-Books where called Judges ,	249
Of Grand Juries ; their Duty, and the great Importance of their Office,	250 to 259
Their Oath ,	251
That Juries are Judges of Law in some Respects, as well as of Facts,	259, 260, 261
That Juries are not fineable, nor any Way to be punish'd under Pretence of their going contrary to Evidence , or against the Judges Directions ,	262 to 268
Of Challenging the Jury , and the several Causes of it,	268 to 273
Of Justices of Peace , their Original, their Office, and Power,	273 to 279
Directions for Coroners , their Office, Fees, &c.	279 to 330
Of Murder ,	297 to 297
Of Manslaughter ,	297, 298
Of Chancemedley ,	299
Of the Office and Duty of a Constable ,	300 to 319
Of the Office and Duty of a Churchwarden ,	319 to 327
Of Overseers of the Poor ; their Office and Duty,	327 to 341
Of the Duty of a Scavenger ,	341 to 346
Of Fairs, Markets, Toll-keepers, &c.	346 to 349
The Duty of the Surveyors of the Highways,	349 to 356
4	English.