A Clause in the Act of 31 Car. 2. Cap. 1.

WHereas by the Laws and Customs of this Realm, the Inhabitants thereof cannot be compelled, against their Wills, to receive Soldiers into their Houses, and to sojourn them there, Be it declared and enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That no Officer, Military or Civil, nor any other Person whatsoever, shall from henceforth presume to place, quarter or billet, any Soldier or Soldiers, upon any Subject or Inhabitant of this Realm, of any Degree, Quality or Profession whatever, without his Consent: And that it shall and may be lawful for every such Subject and Inhabitant, to refuse to sojourn or quarter any Soldier or Soldiers, notwithstanding any Command, Order, Warrant, or Billeting whatsoever.

Having thus collected together divers of the most remarkable and advantageous of our Laws, whereby the Liberties of English-men are guarded and secured; since the best of Laws are but insignificant Cyphers, if not honestly put in Execution; and since in the Execution of our Laws, FURIES are mainly concern'd, who, if Ignorant of their Duty, or corrupt or over-aw'd, and not daring to make use of that just Power, wherewith the Law hath invested and intrusted them, may give up all those precious Privileges, and subject us to the worst kind of Slavery, under pretence of Law: Therefore here in the last Place, for the Information of my honest Country-men, the Free-holders of England, and others, who in Corporations are daily call'd to this important Service, I shall subjoin a brief Discourse of FURIES.
