THERE are thirty-five night Schools in Philadelphia, and the average attendance of pupils is 5,385.

CITY GRAVEYARDS.—Passing up Third avenue yesterday, our attention was attracted by a singular and amusing sight. Between Seventh and Eighth streets, the street manure was piled up in the shape of graves, many of which were adorned by slabs in various shapes. On one of these we saw printed, "Alas, poor Yorick!" another recorded the fact that the Street Inspector of the Seventeenth ward was there decently interred, while still another pile, containing some six cartloads of filth, informed the passer by that the a few public men reclined beneath this ample mound, in the following unique style:—

MEMENTO MORI.

Stranger! here our verdict leaves
The conscience of the "Forty Thieves."
Regarding not the public weal—
For years they've nothing done, but steal;
Neglecting everything but self
They now are laid upon the shelf.
Ay! here they lie, entombed in filth,
With all their vile ill-gotten wealth,
Despised, degraded, and forgot,
Here may their filthy bodies rot.

On inquiry we learned that the street had not been cleaned since early last fall, and the occupants of that particular block finding it impossible to make the proper authorities attend to their duty, entered into a compact to have the street cleaned at their own expense; at the same time they have determined to keep the "graves" in good order, until some daring resurrectionist shall exhume the bodies for scientific purposes, or the Commissioner of Streets shall have the same removed.

Grading.—Manheim street, from Germantown Avenue to the Plank road, has been graded and put in excellent condition. It has in effect been turnpiked, and the plank road company ought to be a little thankful to have this connexion with their road made without expense.

Cattle.

The following tabular statement presents the number of Cattle received here during each of the last eleven years, with the exception of the large number brought in by butchers, of which no account can be obtained:—

A Hospital at Camden.—We learn with pleasure that there is now every prospect of a Hospital being successfully established in Camden. A few days since a number of citizens assembled at the office of Dr. Strafford, formed themselves into an Association, to be chartered according to law, and known as the "Camden Infirmary Society." Several gentlemen were appointed Directors, and the following officers were elected:—John W. McCurdy, President; J. M. Cooper, Vice President; Secretary, M. Crump, M. D.; and Drs. Strafford and Crump were appointed Surgeons to the Institution. The Infirmary will probably be prepared to receive patients some time during the month of January.—Such an establishment has long been required in Camden, where there is at present, no asylum for the reception of casualties. It has our best wishes for success.
