Published at 233 Broadway, New York.
AUGUSTINE DUGANNE, } EDITORS.
M. T. BROCKELBANK, }
Since its Establishment the Proprietors of "THE MESSAGE BIRD" purchased and united with their own the subscription lists of two other first-class periodicals, "The Literary American" and "The Boston Musical Gazette;" the best features of both of which have been incorporated in this Journal. The same amount of music and musical matter will be furnished, with such improvements as can now more readily be made, under its original head of "The Message Bird;" the department of art will receive close attention, and the Literary department of the work, sustain the high reputation which it now enjoys. The "Journal of the Fine Arts" now contains 24 pages of matter; its original papers, editorials, and contributions are of the highest order, and its Correspondence and General Record of Musical Matters, have never been equalled by any Journal of the country. The price will still be $1.50 per year.
