M'CLEES & GERMON'S

DAGUERRETYPE

ROOMS,

No. 182 Chestnut St.

OPPOSITE THE MASONIC HALL,
PHILADELPHIA.

The proprietors, who have been well, and they flatter themselves favorably known as Daguerrean Artists to the Philadelphia public, for the last five years, would respectfully announce that they have fitted up the most elegant Daguerreotype Establishment in the above location, of which our city, so famous for the superiority of its Daguerreotypes can boast.

The increased width of the street, occasioned by the recess formed by the Masonic Hall, (which is directly opposite,) and a front almost entirely of glass, give facilities for an operating room on the second floor, with a North light, (the most pleasant, effective and certain of all others, where a sufficiency can be obtained,) possessed by no other establishment of the city; while the great height of the ceiling not only supercedes the necessity of a top light, but is preferable to it in point of effect, as well as convenience.

STURDIVANT HOUSE,
No. 215 CHESTNUT ST.,
Nearly opposite Barnum's Museum,
C. J. STURDIVANT,
Formerly of Congress Hall.

The Sturdivant House is new throughout, new furniture, newly fitted up, painted and rendered convenient and comfortable for all guests. It is one of the very best located houses in the city of Philadelphia. It is our intention to sustain, and if possible, to surpass the excellent reputation gained by us while keeping Congress Hall.
