

tainting reviews, controversial politics, scribblings of poetry and prose, biographies of unknown names, nor for those teachers of disjointed thinking, the daily newspapers, except, perhaps, for reference to support, since such an authority could never prove the authentic date of an event. In short, let the managers think only of the intrinsic value of additions to their shelves; for I hope (yet fearfully) that the streams flowing into the library will be clear, pure, and deep, diffusing healthy, truthful, and valuable information throughout the community, and not to be overborne by a common flood of contemporary literature that may sweep off the firm foundations of knowledge, and leave no high places for a useful intellect to rest upon, to extend its bounties, and to be secure.

To assist in accomplishing the purposes of instruction above declared, let the contributors strive to elect to the management, if they can be found, at least one or two persons of general knowledge, men of more than common college and high-school education, with broad observation, reflection, and taste, and liberal thoughts; not sectarian to any of the professions, nor to the gains of trade and speculation, but those who have been called "men of good choice," and who may have wider views in government and selection than are commonly taken by the conventional and popular character of most public beneficiaries; recollecting not only there is safety in the multitude and agreement of counsel, but that wisdom, too, should there be found which will insure safety in
