

Third. I have given the copyrights of all my works to the Library Company, and I will and direct that they shall, for the next half century, publish every ten years (and earlier and oftener if called for) an edition of five hundred copies of any or of all of them, so that they shall always have on hand a number sufficient to supply any demand which may be made for any or either of them, at a price not exceeding the cost of publication. I leave additions and corrections in the printer's copies, preparatory to a subsequent edition which I imperatively require to be published exactly as they are left. The original parts of them have been written without assistance, and I wish to be alone responsible for all the faults of thought, division, definition, and style, and of my corrected orthography, as I consider it.

An editor sometimes joins himself to a work by a supposed emendation of it. Let him in a book of his own justly blame what he pleases in mine, but not attempt to suit it to any future times and manners. Every writing should have its own times and manners. Let him prevent, not imagine typographical errors; let him strive to improve my spelling only when the world corrects its own redundancies and confusions on that point. In our important faults it is bad morality, even in science and literature, to try to escape the charge of errors by turning them over to others for correction.

Fourth. In order to insure, as far as is in my power, the application of the various devises and bequests which I have made for the use and benefit of the Library Company, in accordance with my wishes and directions, I hereby devise, direct, will, and declare that the whole and every part of my estate, real and personal, given or devised for the use and benefit of the said Library Company, and all the books and furniture purchased by them with the income and proceeds thereof, shall be taken and held by them (whenever the same by the provisions of my will, or of any codicil thereto, shall come into their possession, and become subject to their control,) as trustees, for
