BRIGADIER-GENERAL JAMES SHIELDS.

Acting Major-General JAMES SHIELDS is a native of the county of Tyrone, in Ireland, where he was born in the year 1810. He is consequently about fifty-two years of age. He first came to this country in the year 1826, being then only sixteen years of age. In 1832 he went West, and settled in Kaskasia, one of the oldest villages of Illinois, where he devoted himself to the study and practice of the law. He was soon after elected to the State Legislature, and in 1839 was made State Auditor. Four years later he was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court, and in 1845, having received from President Polk the appointment of Commissioner of the General Land Office, he removed to Washington. Upon the breaking out of the Mexican war during the following year, the same President appointed Mr. SHIELDS a Brigadier-General of United States Volunteers. His commission was dated July 1, 1846. He was present at the siege of Vera Cruz, and was particularly noted. At the battle of Cerro Gordo he distinguished himself greatly, and the second time shed his blood in defence of his adopted country.

Severely wounded, he continued on the field, urging on his men, until a ball passing through his lungs struck him down. He was carried from the battle field, and was reported so near death that obituary notices appeared of the gallant Colonel in nearly all the papers of the country. It appears that he was entirely given over by the Army Surgeons, when a Mexican Doctor said he would live if he would let him remove the coagulated blood from the wound. SHIELDS told him to try, and a fine silk handkerchief was worked and finally drawn through the wound, removing the extravasated blood, when daylight could be seen through the hole. And yet SHIELDS to-day is a hale and hearty man, free from disease or any inconvenience from his wound, which is considered at the time as mortal, having been made by a large copper ball, and going directly through his body and lungs. For his gallant and meritorious conduct on this occasion, he was in August, 1848, breveted a Major-General of Volunteers. Still suffering from his wounds we find him commanding a brigade in the valley of Mexico, consisting of a battalion of marines and regiments composed of New York and South Carolina volunteers. He was also in the battle of Chapultepec, where, being unhorsed, he fought on foot, bareheaded and in his shirt sleeves, leading his brigade, sword in hand, with a bravery that has made his name remarkable in American history. He was again wounded, and that dangerously, but with care and a good constitution he recovered. His brigade, after performing various deeds, ending in the capture of the city of Mexico, was disbanded on the 20th of July, 1848. The war being ended, General SHIELDS laid down the sword, and assumed once more his place in civil life. He was brilliantly received on his arrival in the United States, and when he returned to the State of his choice (Illinois) he was elected to fill the position vacated by Mr. BREEZE—that of Senator from that State—to represent it in the Capitol at Washington. This was in the year 1849. Owing to some technicality he was refused admission as a Senator, when he promptly resigned the post, and was as promptly re-elected. He returned to Washington, and for six years proved himself to be as able in council as he was on the battle-field.

In 1855 he left the Senate, leaving at the same time Illinois, and went to settle on the lands awarded to him for his services in the army, which lands he had selected in the Territory of Minnesota. When that tract became a State General SHIELDS was returned to represent it in Congress as a Senator, and took his seat after its admission in May, 1858. General SHIELDS having drawn the short term, he had to vacate his seat in 1859, and, not securing a re-election, he went further west into California. From his retirement he was again brought out by the present war, having been appointed by Congress a Brigadier-General, with a commission dating from August 19, 1861.

This commission he at first declined, but, deeming it his duty to stand by his adopted country in her troubles, he came forth, and, after a long voyage, reached the capital, where (his name, in consequence of his refusal, having been stricken from the army list) he waited some time before he obtained a command. The lamented death of General LANDER left that Division without a head, and General SHIELDS was at once appointed to the command, with the rank of Brigadier-General, his division forming part of the corps d'armée of Major-General BANKS. He has again brought himself before the public by his gallant acts, has again been wounded upon the battle field, and once more our country rings with the name of "General SHIELDS."

General SHIELDS is of good personal appearance, about five feet eight inches in stature, with dark complexion. His style of speaking is easy, fluent and agreeable.

GEN. JAMES S. WADSWORTH.

GENERAL JAMES S. WADSWORTH, who fell at the head of his command in the battle of the 6th inst., in the Wilderness, beyond the Rapidan, was one of the first volunteers of the war. His first service in the field was under M'DOWELL at Bull Run. About the 1st of August, 1861, he was commissioned a Brigadier-General; and during the long drilling months which succeeded General M'CLELLAN's appointment to the command-in-chief General WADSWORTH won for himself the credit, among the most experienced army officers, of having his brigade, long before the close of the year, in the most efficient condition alike as to drill and discipline. In the spring of 1862 General WADSWORTH was appointed Military Governor of the District of Columbia; and on the advance of General M'CLELLAN to Manassas, and subsequently to the Peninsula, General WADSWORTH's command extended to Occoquan Bay. In the winter of 1862-3, after his defeat as candidate for Governor of New York, he passed several months in the field, and was engaged at the battle of Chancellorsville. He was charged later in the season with a mission to the Southwest and the Gulf States, in connection with the organization of colored troops; and his latest position was that of General of the Fourth Division of the Fifth Corps. He gave his sons as well as himself to the service of his country, and used his large means with the utmost liberality to aid the national cause. He was nearly fifty-seven years of age.

Captain CHARLES WILKES, whose name is now upon the lips of every American, is well known both in science and navigation. Born in the State of New York in 1805, he entered the Naval service of his country in 1818, being but thirteen years of age. He gave evidence of marked ability by scientific researches, and subsequently received at the hands of the American Government the command of a Naval Expedition, intended to explore the countries bordering on the Pacific and Southern Oceans. His command consisted of two sloops of war, a brig, and two tenders, and he himself had the grade of captain. He doubled Cape Horn, crossed over to Polynesia, Van Diemen's Land and Australia, advancing as high as the sixty-first degree of south latitude; he then visited the Feejee Islands and Borneo, and returned to New York in 1842, after having visited Singapore and the Cape of Good Hope. This memorable expedition of four years was fertile in useful observations, which Captain WILKES subsequently gave to the world in a very able work in five octavo volumes, entitled "A Narrative of the United States Exploring Expedition."

Nov 20 1861

CAPTAIN CHARLES WILKES.

Captain WILKES has published several works on geographical research, especially valuable for reference. The statistics, drawings, maps, &c., are of the highest order. The Geographical Society of London, in 1848 presented him with a gold medal, in appreciation of his labors. Capt. WILKES received his present commission in 1855, and stands, according to the last Navy List, No. 51 on the list of Captains. He has been in the service altogether about forty three years, having been on shore and other duty twenty-seven years, and on sea service ten years, allowing but seven years of his term unemployed. His last duty at sea was in June 1842, and before being ordered to the San Jacinto, he was upon special duty at Washington, upon matters connected with his Exploring Expedition.

Returning from the Coast of Africa he found orders on his way home to look for pirates or vessels attempting to run the blockade, and has been performing that duty for the past six weeks. While engaged in this business he fell in with the vessel containing the two Rebel Ministers.

Map Showing the Position of the "San Jacinto" at the time of the Capture of Mason and Slidell.

The capture of the Rebel Ministers has not only created a desire on the part of the public to know something of the private and public history of the traitors themselves, and also of their captors, but every particular relative to the capture is eagerly scanned by the community. Upon the above map we have designated the exact locality where the British vessel was overhauled, the vessel to the westward representing the Trent, which, it will be remembered, was met by the San Jacinto in the narrowest part of the Bahama channel, about twenty-four miles to the westward, and when she was only twenty-four hours out of Havana, bound for St. Thomas.

CAPTURE OF DAVIS.

A PICKED company of WILSON'S command captured JEFFERSON DAVIS on the morning of May 10, at Irwingsville, Georgia. The company was commanded by Colonel PRITCHARD, of the Fourth Michigan. The following is General WILSON'S dispatch announcing the capture:

MACON, GA., 9.30 A.M., May 13, 1865.
 Hon. E. M. Stanton, Sec. of War.
 Lieut.-Colonel HARDEN, commanding the First Wisconsin, has just arrived from Irwingsville. He struck the trail of DAVIS at Dublin, Laurens County, on the evening of the 7th, and followed him closely, night and day, through the pine wilderness of Alligator Creek and Green Swamps, to Cumberlandville to Irwingsville. At Cumberlandville Colonel HARDEN met Colonel PRITCHARD, with 150 picked men and horses of the Fourth Michigan. HARDEN followed the trail directly south, while PRITCHARD, having fresher horses, pushed down the Ocmulgee toward Hopewell, and thence by House Creek to Irwingsville, arriving there at midnight of the 9th. JEFFERSON DAVIS had not arrived. From a citizen PRITCHARD learned that his party were encamped two miles out of the town. He made dispositions of his men, and surrounded the camp before day. HARDEN had camped at 3 P.M. within two miles, as he afterward learned, from DAVIS. The trail being too indistinct to follow, he pushed on at 3 A.M., and had gone but little more than one mile when his advance was fired upon by men of the Fourth Michigan. A fight ensued, both parties exhibiting the greatest determination. Fifteen minutes elapsed before the mistake was discovered. The firing in this skirmish was the first warning that DAVIS received. The captors report that he hastily put on one of his wife's dresses and started for the woods, closely followed by our men, who at first thought him a woman, but seeing his boots while he was running, they suspected his sex at once. The race was a short one, and the rebel President was soon brought to bay. He brandished a bowie-knife and showed signs of battle, but yielded promptly to the persuasion of COL'S revolvers, without compelling the men to fire. He expressed great indignation at the energy with which he was pursued, saying that he had believed our Government were too magnanimous to hunt down women and children. Mrs. DAVIS remarked to Colonel HARDEN, after the excitement was over, that the men had better not provoke the President, or "he might hurt some of 'em." REAGAN behaves himself with dignity and resignation. The party, evidently, were making for the coast.

J. H. WILSON,
 Brevet Major-General.

The captured party included DAVIS'S family, with REAGAN, Postmaster-General; Colonel HARRISON, Private Secretary; Colonel JOHNSON, Aid-de-Camp; Col. MORRIS, Colonel LUBBICK, Lieut. HATHAWAY, and others.

Less than five years ago Brevet Major-General JAMES H. WILSON, the captor of JEFFERSON DAVIS, was a cadet at West Point. He was born in Southern Illinois, about the year 1840. He was made Second Lieutenant at the beginning of the war, to date from June 10, 1861. He occupied the position of Chief of Engineers on the Staff of General T. W. SHERMAN in the expedition to Hilton Head, South Carolina. In the operations against Palaski he rendered valuable service in finding a passage for gun-boats drawing ten feet of water and clear of the guns of the fort. This enabled our troops to establish a battery at Venus Point. Lieut. WILSON remained in the Department of the South, conspicuously engaged on engineer duty until the summer of 1862, when he served for a short time as aid to

General McCLELLAN. On November 3, 1862, he was appointed Assistant Inspector-General, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel of Volunteers, and assigned to General GRANT, by whom he was for several months assigned to duty on the staff of Major-General JAMES B. M'PHERSON. During the operations in Mississippi and against Vicksburg Colonel WILSON was again conspicuous for his engineering skill; and in the brilliant victories of General GRANT, in the vicinity of Chattanooga, won the official commendation of General W. F. SMITH, with whom he was then acting. On December 31, 1863, he was nominated Brigadier-General of Volunteers, to date from October 30, 1863, and was confirmed May 12, 1864, upon the recommendation of Lieutenant-General GRANT. In January, 1864, General WILSON was appointed chief of the Cavalry Bureau in Washington. In April following he was assigned to the command of the Third Division Cavalry Corps, Major-General SHERIDAN, Army of the Potomac. During General GRANT'S Virginia campaign he acted independently, to the right and rear of the army, to destroy railroads. He also covered the rear from Coal Harbor to the south side of the James River. In June and the beginning of July he conducted a raid south of Richmond, destroying the railroads and throwing the enemy in a great state of alarm. After the necessity of cavalry operations in the vicinity of Richmond and Petersburg had passed, General WILSON was transferred to the Shenandoah Valley, where he added to his reputation as an efficient officer. For distinguished service he was brevetted Major-General of Volunteers, to date from October 5, 1864. During the winter he was transferred to the Department of the Cumberland, and by Gen. THOMAS was placed in command of the cavalry corps of the Army of the Cumberland. On March 23, 1865, General WILSON started from Chickasaw, Alabama, with his troops well mounted and equipped. After routing RODDY at Monticello, he moved on and annihilated the combined forces of FORREST, LYON, and CHALMERS, under FORREST, and occupied Selma, Alabama, on April 2. Thence he moved on to Montgomery, thence swept across Georgia, reach-

THE RETIREMENT OF GENERAL SCOTT.

We publish on this page a picture of the last interview between GENERAL SCOTT and the CABINET on the day of his retirement. On 31st October the following letter from him was received by the President:

HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ARMY, WASHINGTON, Oct. 31, 1861.

The Hon. SIMON CAMERON, Secretary of War:
Sir,—For more than three years I have been unable, from a hurt, to mount a horse or to walk more than a few paces at a time, and that with much pain. Other and now infringes—dyspey and vertigo—admonish me that repose of mind and body, with the appliances of surgery and medicine, are necessary to add a little more to a life already protracted much beyond the usual span of man.

It is under such circumstances, made doubly painful by the unnatural and unjust rebellion now raging in the Southern States of our so lately prosperous and happy Union, that I am compelled to request that my name be placed on the list of army officers retired from active service. As this request is founded on an absolute right, granted by a recent act of Congress, I am entirely at liberty to say it is with deep regret that I withdraw myself, in these momentous times, from the orders of a President who has treated me with much distinguished kindness and courtesy, whom I know, upon much personal intercourse, to be patriotic, without sectional partialities or prejudices, to be highly conscientious in the performance of every duty, and of unrivaled activity and perseverance. I remain, Sir, with high respect, your obedient servant, WHEELER SCOTT.

It was decided that General Scott's request, under the circumstances of his advanced age and

COMMANDERY OF THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS.
MILITARY ORDER OF THE LOYAL LEGION OF THE UNITED STATES.
CADET ARMORY, BOSTON.

November 21, 1904.

Dear Sir and Companion :

This Commandery has for twenty years been engaged in collecting photographs and prints of Civil War scenes and war-time portraits of officers who served in the Army or Navy. No other Commandery having undertaken a collection of such wide scope, it is felt that your co-operation may well be asked to make ours one that will creditably represent the whole Order.

The collection, which already contains over 25,000 pictures, and also the library of war literature and collection of relics, are in fireproof quarters, open to the public under proper conditions.

You are earnestly requested to send to us such photographs, your own and any regimental, naval, general or staff officers, as you may be pleased to contribute, the carte-de-visite size being most available.

Very respectfully,

ARNOLD A. RAND, Colonel, U. S. V., Recorder,
19 Milk Street, Boston.

PRANG'S

Card-Portraits of Prominent Characters.

This is a most unique and original publication of lifelike Miniature Portraits (line engravings), just large enough to enclose in a common letter envelope, for satisfying the curiosity of distant friends, or to ORNAMENT a PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUM or the MANTEL-PIECE. They are executed with such marked ability that a connoisseur cannot help admiring each day brings forth its FAULTLESS or its ORIGINAL.

Through our branch offices, South and West, we have every facility for obtaining lifelike originals to copy from; and as our productions are, in most cases, submitted to the individuals themselves for approval, the public may be satisfied that our Portraits are as true to nature as art can render them. Our Pictures have not the soft appearance of Photographs, but they have the great advantage — not to fade for centuries; and, for collections to preserve, they are invaluable.

We increase the collection every week by additional Portraits of interesting personages. The money must accompany every order. Sent to any address in the United States free of postage.

Our terms to the Trade are very liberal; they may be obtained by addressing, with stamp enclosed, —

L. PRANG & CO., PUBLISHERS AND LITHOGRAPHERS, 109, Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Parties wishing to obtain a Portrait of some particular person, not in our list, can have such made to order, at reasonable terms and short notice, guaranteeing to them the exclusive sale.
