

COL. EDWARD D. BAKER,
KILLED NEAR LEESBURG VA. ON THE 21ST OCTOBER 1861.

THE BATTLE FIELD OF BALL'S BLUFF, OCTOBER 21ST

We present our readers with a rough sketch of the scene of the late engagement, made by our special correspondent who has been at the Ferry for several days—the route of the California Regiment, their position at different hours, the spot where BAKER fell, and the position of the troops at the time.

It will be seen that instead of Colonel BAKER "bringing on an engagement contrary to orders," he merely crossed according to orders, halted his men as soon as he could get a spot on which they could stand, and when the Massachusetts Regiments, who had crossed before him, were pursued down through this field, he marched to their rescue only a hundred yards and drove the Rebels back. He opened upon them with the two howitzers and one cannon, and dealt out devastation with every round, but only fired seven charges when all his gunners were shot.

The Rebels then swarmed around to the right and opened on the Massachusetts Fifteenth, and in a few minutes the firing became general all around our heroic band. The Rebel force consisted of the Mississippi Brigade, Louisiana Brigade, Confederate Rifle Regiment, Virginia Eighth, and Tiger Zouaves, under General EVANS. We had not sixteen hundred men over the river when the fighting commenced, and four hundred were on picket, protecting the route to the river. After 2 1/2 P. M., our men were shot down faster than reinforcements could be brought over. For three hours and a half they held their ground, and repelled every attempt of the Rebels to make a bayonet charge.

After they retreated to the river, three separate charges were made up the bluffs to repel the Rebels, and it was about eleven before our men ran out of ammunition and surrendered to the Rebel crew, because they could not retreat and could no longer fight.

The defence of the Pass of Thermopylae sinks into insignificance in comparison to this gallant stand by our little band of heroes. Henceforth no man of them need ask for other evidence of their bravery, courage and valor than to show that they were with General BAKER at Ball's Bluff.

For much of the important information delineated on our map we are indebted to First Lieutenant JAMES JOHNSON, of Company N, who was one of the coolest men upon the field. After pushing off the last boat with our wounded, he sprang into the river and swam across amidst a shower of leaden hail poured upon him by the Rebels, who now swarmed along the shore. The letter A marked upon the map designates the point where a steamer was made for four hours. At the point B is a bluff, covered with vines and bushes, up which the men were compelled to crawl.

COL. WISTAR'S OFFICIAL REPORT

THE CALIFORNIA REGIMENT AT BALL'S BLUFF.

HEAD-QUARTERS CALIFORNIA REGIMENT,
CAMP NEAR FOGGLES, CALIF., NOV. 1, 1861.
Brigadier-General CHARLES F. STONE, Commanding Division - General. - Being partially released by my physicians from their injunctions of solitude and silence, I proceed to report to you the operations of a part of my regiment on the 21st ult.

At half-past two P. M. on that day, I received your order through our late lieutenant, Brigade Commander, to march with my first battalion, so as to arrive below Conrad's Ferry by sunrise.

At sunrise I was there with the battalion, numbering five hundred and seventy men, in eight companies, including officers. I immediately sent an officer to report to you at Edwards' Ferry, between four and five miles below, who returned about half-past eight, with your orders "to wait further orders, unless I should hear heavy firing over the river, in which event to cross at once, and support Colonel DEVINS." Slight firing had occurred there about an hour before, but after the reception of this order there was no more whatever until afternoon. A very short time after this order reached me, General BAKER and staff arrived. I communicated my orders to him, when, after a brief conversation, he continued on down the river in search of you. In half an hour, an officer of his staff returned with the order:—"General BAKER directs you to cross at once." I had scarcely time to commence crossing when General BAKER himself returned and directed me to proceed with all haste.

I had two scows, of the capacity of forty men each on the Maryland side of Harrison's Island, and one on the Virginia side, of the capacity of fifty men. I had got four companies on the island and one on the Virginia side, (having been delayed at the second crossing by other troops), when General BAKER arrived on the island and crossed at once to the Virginia side.

After crossing six companies to the Virginia side, I left the island and passed over myself, leaving Captain BRYMAN to duty in the transportation.

The Virginia side of the river was a bluff, eighty feet high, nearly perpendicular and covered with rocks and a dense thicket. Stretching away directly from the summit, was an open field of about one-half mile, extending back from the river two hundred yards by a width of seventy; this was entirely surrounded by woods, except a triangular opening about two-thirds of the length of the field from the river, extending into the woods on the left, say one hundred yards.

When I reached the top of the bluff, Gen. BAKER immediately explained to me his plan of battle, stating his whole force to be twelve hundred men, at the same time sending me your despatch, announcing the approach of the army of the enemy from Leesburg, and expressing serious doubts of the result. The detachment of the Fifteenth Massachusetts was drawn up in the edge of the woods on the right, facing up the river. The rest of our forces were drawn up across the open field at right angles with the former, their backs towards the river; my battalion having the left, three companies being in reserve, and one deployed as skirmishers to cover the left flank.

From the left of our position, at the edge of the woods, the guns were fired rapidly to the left, about thirty yards, to a gully, on the other side of which it rose to a hill higher than the one on which we stood, at short distance.

The enemy then commenced a scattering fire from three troops all around the field, where they had placed their skirmishers—our men lying down for shelter.

After comprehending the general condition of affairs, I immediately requested permission to make a change in the disposition of the troops. I then, I believe, when General BAKER directed me to take command of the left flank, and make any disposition I saw fit. In pursuance of this order I was about to advance my skirmishers to the left when General BAKER intervened, and, after a brief conversation with Colonel COGSWELL and myself, directed me to throw out two companies as skirmishers to feel the woods in front, getting as much cover for the movement as possible from the woods on the left, with directions if attacked, in force, to contest the ground and fall back fighting.

In the execution of this order, Captain JOHN MARKOE, with his company (A), immediately moved out, Company (D) following in support under Lieut. WADE—the latter company being in front of Company A, and the bulk of my command needing no immediate attention. I accompanied the movement myself.

The two companies moved rapidly up, under cover of the woods on the left, until reaching the triangular open space before spoken of, when they were met by a galling fire from the enemy's rifle-men on their front and left. The company A, led by the gallant MARKOE, and closely followed by D, rushing quickly over the open ground entered the wood, when a whole regiment of the enemy rose up from the ground at thirty paces distance and charged with the bayonet. A severe contest ensued. Our skirmishers soon checked the enemy's charge by taking trees and throwing an effective fire into their crowded ranks at close distance. The right wing of our skirmishers were soon destroyed, but the left continued to hold ground for some time until MARKOE was wounded and taken prisoner, when the survivors slowly fell back, actually bringing with them as prisoner an officer of the "Eighth Virginia," whom I had the honor of sending to you the following morning.

These two companies suffered very severely in this most gallant effort, Company A having lost all three of its officers and all of its sergeants, except two, one of whom is wounded.

The enemy, in force in front, hearing this sharp firing on their right, immediately (half past two P. M.) opened a tremendous fire on our main body, and as soon as our skirmishers had fallen back, made repeated and desperate efforts, in constantly accelerating force, to turn our left with the bayonet. Five times they charged down the gully, and as we were then ordered to give back by the cool, steady conduct, and the heavy fire of our men. Our firing in front I do not think was very effective, the enemy being well covered in the woods—but on the left it was terrible, our men bravely enduring a destructive fire from the first, and holding, with steadiness and determination, the enemy's repeated charges from this direction. The rifle twelve-pounder afforded valuable aid. All its artillerists having been killed or dispersed, it was worked by Lieutenants KRAMER and two of our regiments, of the California and Tammany Regiments, with great effect.

At a quarter past five the enemy succeeded, by dint of numbers, in gaining a footing on our side of the gully, when our men, realizing the greater danger, became mixed up, and a desperate hand-to-hand contest ensued.

Our right and centre being at the same time severely pressed were unable to afford us any assistance. At this moment I was finally disabled by the third wound, and a moment afterwards, almost in the same spot, the brave General BAKER fell—gloriously, at the head of his men.

His death was instantly avenged and his body recovered by a few brave men, led by Captain BRADLEY and Captain HANCOCK, (Brigade Adjutant-General).

A fierce and bloody contest was now taking place; fresh masses of the enemy swarmed in on all sides, when the order was given by some one to the men of another regiment, "Retreat to the ferry!" This withdrew a portion of our numbers, and caused some confusion among the men of the California and Tammany Regiments, who stood nobly by each other to the last, retiring, first by inch, slowly and with considerable order, until pressed to the bayonet, and then by a portion of the enemy. Our men now maintained a sharp fire from the river bank, and made two or three spirited charges, led by Colonel COGSWELL, which held the enemy in check at the top of the bluff, until all our men who could swim had diverted themselves of arms and clothing and taken to the water.

Finding further resistance impossible, and with no means whatever of crossing the river, (the only scow having sunk some time previously with all hands), our men, except a few who remained with the remainder, surrendered at 11 P. M.

The two howitzers, and most of the small arms, were successfully concealed in the river. The 12-pound gun was thrown over the bluff with the same intention, but lodged among trees and rocks.

Color-Sergeant R. C. WOODS was shot through both legs, successively, early in the action. The colors were seized by private GEORGE SUTTER, Co. G, who bore them bravely through the remainder of the scene, but, in attempting to swim the river with them, was obliged, from excessive cold and fatigue, to let them go in the middle of the stream.

The other Color-Sergeant, — VANBANT, also displayed the most conspicuous gallantry, and after dark waded into the river waist deep, and buried his colors under a pile of stones. They had been first shot to tatters, and the staff cut in two, by the enemy's bullets.

Subsequent events were witnessed by yourself in person.

The bravery and steadiness of the officers and men of my command throughout the whole affair, under the trying circumstances, was beyond all praise—Many of the men actually supplied themselves with cartridges from the dead bodies of the enemy, after their lives had been expended.

Of the eighteen officers, of all ranks, present in action, all are either killed, wounded, or missing, except two lieutenants.

Of the 600 men, five hundred and seventy officers and men whom I took into action, the total loss, in killed, wounded and missing (many of the latter being necessarily left dead or wounded on the field, or drowned in the river), amounts to three hundred and five, according to the returns before submitted.

I have the honor to be, General,
Your obedient servant,
ISAAC J. WISTAR,
Lieut.-Col. Commanding California Reg't.

PHILADELPHIA, DEC. 8, 1861.

The Battle of Ball's Bluff.

The following narrative of the experience of Albert Wisner, a private of Company A, California Regiment, is interesting as a personal narrative, and may give some idea of the excitement which man feels upon the battle-field. Private Wisner was shot through the shoulder, and is now in this city:

It was three o'clock on the morning of October 21st we arrived at the Potomac, and crossed over in our scow; got four companies on the island by eleven o'clock. We crossed on to the other side of the island at about twelve o'clock. After we ascended to the top of the bluff, Col. Baker rode on his gray horse, putting his men in line of battle. I tapped one man on the shoulder, and said: "There is the pretty bird! and if he was here how happy it would make me!" It was not long before the California Regiment was formed in line of battle on the left, and Company D as a reserve, and we soon got orders to move as skirmishers. We went through a wood about fifty yards. When we got through that, we got into an open field, about one hundred yards wide. I happened to be about ten feet ahead of the line of skirmishers, when private Parker said: "Wisner, come back! you are always ahead! and don't have me believing at you so often, for we are in a dangerous place, and you will soon have a chance to show your spunk!" Then I looked to the right, and saw that I really was too far ahead of the rest. Then I observed four men rising out of a rifle pit, to my left. One man I observed in particular. He was the tallest man that I ever saw in all my travels. He took deliberate aim at my right eye. But, through God's will, he didn't hit me. Then I said "Bah! can't you do better than that?" and I quick up with my musket and brought him down, and then I got into my place in the ranks. At the same time a man shot at me from the top of a tree, but he also missed me, when private Jim King brought him down from his resting place as quick as he could bring a robin to the ground. By this time I was loaded, and called to the boys to follow me. I had only advanced to my former place, when I observed four thousand rebels rise up right before us, in all kinds of dresses, and some officer gave the command to charge. I raised my rifle, and brought my man out of the ranks, and I never saw so many fall in all the fight as at that time. All our rifles told, and then I retreated to the side of Colonel Wistar, the balls flying thick and fast all around us. A ball now came whizzing by me, hitting our brave Colonel Wistar in the face. But he didn't mind that, until another ball hit him in the arm, making a severe wound, when some of our brave boys helped him across the river, then Col. Baker said, "What deliberate aim they are taking at me!" Said he, "There is Johnston!" and the very moment when I was putting a cartridge in my gun, I looked around and saw a man on a bay horse, with a red hat, and a dusty looking coat, wearing a cotton handkerchief, with a globe in the center, which resembled the world. Think I, my boy, you're my name, and I up with my rifle, took deliberate aim, and shot him through the breast. He leaped about four feet from his horse, and took several somersaults, which Dan Rice couldn't do if he would try, and he fell to the ground. Think I, what a life to shot men in this manner; but there was no time to think. If I wouldn't, they would; and when I had shot my seventh man, our brave Gen. Baker fell not far away from where I was standing. But I kept my eyes on him, until I had to retreat behind Baker, on the top of the hill, for the enemy was closing in on us very fast, right and left. Think I, I will take Gen. Baker over the hill, but the enemy was too thick for me; but still I stood my ground, when one of the rebels came up to take the body; but I dropped him aside of Baker's corpse, and served another one the same way; as he came creeping up the hill on hands and feet, I shot him through the head and all that he said was "Bah!" and stretched out. When I shot my seventh man, I ran up to Col. Baker's corpse, but had to retreat again. Said I, "Let's try it again; dead or alive, come on, boys!" when we rushed up, making noise enough to scare the enemy. After I had

FLAG-OFFICER STRINGHAM,

COMMANDING THE ATLANTIC BLOCKADING SQUADRON

Commodore SILAS H. STRINGHAM, whose portrait we publish above, is a native of the State of New York, and was born near Newburgh, Orange county. He has been connected with our navy and in active service since the 15th of November, 1809, when he entered as midshipman, at the age of eleven. His present commission bears date September 8, 1841, and since then he has been at sea nearly five years. Since his entrance in the navy he has passed twenty-two years at sea. In 1830 he commanded the Falmouth, attached to the West India Squadron. In 1835 he sailed in the John Adams, from New York, to join the Mediterranean Squadron, and returned in 1837. The same year he took command of the Porpoise, to go in search of a pirate on our coast. In 1842 he commanded the Independence, attached at that time to the Home Squadron, and in 1847 he had charge of the Ohio, which was sent to Brazil on special service, for the purpose of conveying to that country the American Minister and suite. His advancement has been by the regular course of promotion. The Department at Washington have always had the fullest confidence in his ability, as is shown by the many and important commands in which he has been placed. Since holding his present rank he has successively been Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, followed by a cruise to the Brazils, then Commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, then a cruise as Commodore of the Mediterranean Squadron, from whence he returned in July, 1855; was soon ordered to the Charlestown Navy Yard as Commandant, holding that position some four years. Upon leaving there he was the recipient of various testimonials of esteem and regard from those under his command.

Upon the incoming of the present Administration he was early ordered to Washington on special duty, and upon deciding to blockade all the Southern ports, he was ordered to his present command, reaching from Key West on the south to Cape Charles, at the mouth of Chesapeake Bay, on the north, with the Minnesota, a forty gun steamer, as the flag-ship, and some twenty-five vessels in all, manned by 3500 sailors and marines. The fleet is the most important ever put in commission by the Department (although not yet as large as it should be to be entirely effective.)

In person the Commodore is of medium height and a compact, athletic frame, of manly bearing and frank demeanor; in manner, a pleasing mixture of gentleman-like refinement and sailor-like frankness, with a character of high moral tone, "without fear and without reproach." No officer is more beloved and respected by those who serve under him than Commodore STRINGHAM, and the flag of our Union is in safe keeping while under his care.

Commodore SAMUEL F. DUPONT, the commander of the Naval forces of this great expedition, is a native of the State of New Jersey, but received his appointment into the Navy from the State of Delaware, of which he is a citizen. His original entry into the service of his country was on the 19th of December, 1815; he has been, therefore, nearly forty-six years in the service. Up to the present time, Commodore DUPONT has spent nearly twenty-two years on sea, eight and a half years in active duty on shore, and the balance of his time has been unemployed. His present commission bears date September 14, 1855. He was lost at sea in May, 1859; and, from that date until ordered to join the great Naval Expedition, he occupied the post of Commandant of the Navy Yard in this city. Among the important positions that Commodore DUPONT has filled since he has been in the Navy are the following:—

In June, 1836, Commodore DUPONT—then Lieutenant—commanded the Warren, now the store-ship stationed at Panama, N.G., that was attached to the squadron of Commodore A. J. DALLAS, cruising in the West Indies. In December, '43, he commanded the U. S. brig Perry, while on the way to Rio de Janeiro, bound to the West Indies. In October, 1845, he also commanded the frigate Congress. She was at that time flag ship of Commodore ROBERT F. STOCKTON, and was carrying out Mr. TEN EyCK, U. States Commissioner to the Sandwich Islands, and also Mr. KUZARELL, United States Consul to the Sandwich Islands. In July, 1846, he was commander of the sloop-of-war Cyane, at the time attached to the squadron of Commodores W. B. SHUBRICK and THOMAS A. C. JONES, in the Pacific. The selection of Commodore DUPONT to his present position has given universal satisfaction.

COMMODORE SAMUEL F. DUPONT.

Commodore DUPONT is a man a little past what is usually termed the prime of life, but is possessed of all the vigor, bodily strength and ambition that usually characterizes younger men. In his personal appearance, the Commodore is a person that would at once attract attention, having all the easy grace of a finished gentleman, together with a commanding look that betokens perseverance and determination to successfully carry out any undertaking that he may be engaged in.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL A. E. BURNSIDE.

THE BURNSIDE EXPEDITION.

Brigadier-General Burnside.

AMBROSE EVERETT BURNSIDE, who commands the expedition just sailed from Annapolis, was born at Liberty, Union county, Indiana, 23d May, 1824. At the age of eighteen years he was entered at West Point, and was graduated fifteenth in a class of forty-seven members, in 1847. He was brevetted Second Lieutenant in the Second Artillery, and was transferred the next year to the Third Artillery. Joining his regiment in Mexico, he marched in PATTERSON'S column to the city of Mexico, where he remained till peace was declared. Returning to the North, he was stationed at Fort Adams, in Newport Harbor. In 1849 he was attached as a First Lieutenant to Captain (now Rebel General) BRAGG'S battery, and was engaged for three or four years in frontier service in New Mexico. In an engagement with the Apache Indians in August, 1859, near Los Vegas, Lieutenant BURNSIDE commanded a company of twenty-nine men, who killed eighteen Indians, took nine prisoners, and captured forty horses. For this action he was recommended for promotion. He afterwards served as Quartermaster to the Commission which surveyed the boundary line between the United States and Mexico. In 1851 he crossed the Plains from the Gila River through the Indian territory, traveling twelve hundred miles in seventeen days, with an escort of but three men, bringing despatches from Colonel GRAHAM to the President.

Lieut. BURNSIDE was next stationed at Fort Adams, and while there he resigned his commission for the purpose of devoting his attention to the manufacture of a breech-loading rifle of his own invention, and took up his residence at Bristol, R. I. His new enterprise proving unfortunate, he went to Chicago and entered the office of the Illinois Central Railroad Company as Cashier of the Land Department, while GEORGE B. (now General) McCLELLAN was General Superintendent, and afterwards Vice President of the Company. After holding the position of Cashier two years, BURNSIDE was elected Treasurer of the Company, and removed to New York. While acting in this capacity, soon after the outbreak of the rebellion, he received a telegraph despatch from Governor SPRAGUE, notifying him that the First Rhode Island Regiment of one thousand men was raised, and asking him to take the command. In half an hour he left his office and was on his way to Providence. The regiment was one of the first which went to Washington, and took part in the engagement at Stone Bridge, Colonel BURNSIDE acting as Brigadier-General during that battle. His conduct on that occasion commended him to the attention of the authorities at Washington, and on the sixth of August he was appointed Brigadier-General of Volunteers. General McCLELLAN, who knows his worth and military capacity, has selected him to command one of the most important expeditions projected since the commencement of the war.

MONITOR

The "Merrimac" as a Rebel Battering Ram.

The accompanying engraving of the Merrimac is from a sketch furnished by a mechanic who came from Norfolk under a flag of truce. He says that he worked on her and is of course familiar with her appearance.

The Merrimac was partially burned and then sunk at the time of the destruction of the Gosport Navy Yard last spring, by the order of our government, to prevent the stores therein from falling into the hands of the secessionists. She was one of the finest steam frigates in our navy, 3,200 tons burthen and carrying 40 large guns. She was built at Charlestown, Mass., in 1855.

We have had accounts from time to time that the secessionists had succeeded in raising the Merrimac, and were repairing her. The mechanic who furnishes the sketch says that her hull has been cut down to within three feet of her light-water mark, and a bomb-proof house built on her gun deck, and that she is not iron plated as yet. Her bow and stern have been steel clad with a projecting angle of iron for the purpose of piercing a vessel. Her armament consists of four 11-inch navy guns on each side, with one 100-pounder Armstrong at the bow and stern. She has no masts, and only a pilot-house and smoke-stack are to be seen above the bomb-proof deck. Her bomb-proof is three inches thick and made of wrought iron. If the secessionists get her within reach of either of Rodman's big guns, the 15-inch or the 12-inch rifled cannon, it will afford a fine opportunity to try the effect of that ordnance on the 3-inch plates of her bomb-proof.

Grant in '64—the Calm and Silent Center of a Furious Storm Nearing Its Climax.

A modest-appearing man, sitting quietly beside his patient wife and cheerful little boy, in front of a slat cottage—who would think this to be Ulysses S. Grant, Commander-in-Chief of the Armies of the United States, and center of the fiercest storm that has ever convulsed the American republic?

It was Brady's unparalleled opportunity to fix the features of great men at great moments, for all posterity. This photograph was taken in City Point, Va., at the winter headquarters, '64-'65, of the Union army threatening Petersburg. Yet the stubborn Confederate forts were not the only obstacles to Grant's plans. Around him had raged furious criticism from the public of the Union states. The cry of "Grant the Butcher!" arose again and again, as people recalled the Bloody Wilderness campaign just over.

Still another faction clamored "On to Richmond!" little reckoning, as Grant did, the military cost of a premature advance.

But the grim General sat still, kept his own counsel, and planned for the tightening of the net around Richmond.

How little the term "butcher" fitted Grant can be judged from his conduct after Lee had surrendered at Appomattox. Grant returned to his headquarters; he sat in front of his tent; all his officers gathered about him, eager to hear what he would say about the crowning event of his life. But their expectations were doomed to disappointment. He turned to General Rufus Ingalls, and spoke his first words: "Ingalls, do you remember that old white mule that so-and-so used to ride in the City of Mexico?" and then the General-in-chief went on to recall the antics played by that mule.

Grant went to Washington early the next morning; he did not desire to look at the brave men who had lost; he was anxious above all things to begin the reduction of the military establishment.

JESSE L. RENO, commanding the Second Brigade, is a Pennsylvanian by birth, and is now thirty-six years of age. He was entered at West Point in 1842, and was graduated seventh in his class in 1846. He was brevetted Second Lieutenant of Ordnance, and went to Mexico, participating in every engagement from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico. For his gallantry at Cerro Gordo he was brevetted First Lieutenant, 18th April, 1847. At Chapultepec he was wounded, and was brevetted Captain 13th September, 1847. In both these engagements he commanded a battery. After the peace with Mexico, for six months, he was Assistant Professor of Mathematics at West Point, and for the next year and a half was Secretary to the Artillery Board, during which time he was engaged in testing heavy ordnance and compiling tactics for heavy artillery. For a time he was on the Coast Survey, and was afterwards employed in topographical duty at the West, and was a year engaged in building the military road from the Big Sioux river to St. Paul, Minnesota Territory. From 1854 to 1857 he was stationed at the Frankfort Arsenal. He then went to Utah as chief ordnance officer of the expedition under General Johnston, and stayed there till 1859, when he returned and was stationed at Mount Vernon Arsenal, in Alabama. Since then he has been on duty at Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, and was appointed Brigadier-General of Volunteers, 12th November, 1861.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL JAMES SHIELDS.

Acting Major-General JAMES SHIELDS is a native of the county of Tyrone, in Ireland, where he was born in the year 1810. He is consequently about fifty-two years of age. He first came to this country in the year 1826, being then only sixteen years of age. In 1832 he went West, and settled in Kaskasia, one of the oldest villages of Illinois, where he devoted himself to the study and practice of the law. He was soon after elected to the State Legislature, and in 1839 was made State Auditor. Four years later he was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court, and in 1845, having received from President Polk the appointment of Commissioner of the General Land Office, he removed to Washington. Upon the breaking out of the Mexican war during the following year, the same President appointed Mr. SHIELDS a Brigadier-General of United States Volunteers. His commission was dated July 1, 1846. He was present at the siege of Vera Cruz, and was particularly noted. At the battle of Cerro Gordo he distinguished himself greatly, and the second time shed his blood in defence of his adopted country.

Severely wounded, he continued on the field, urging on his men, until a ball passing through his lungs struck him down. He was carried from the battle field, and was reported so near death that obituary notices appeared of the gallant Colonel in nearly all the papers of the country. It appears that he was entirely given over by the Army Surgeons, when a Mexican Doctor said he would live if he would let him remove the coagulated blood from the wound. SHIELDS told him to try, and a fine silk handkerchief was worked and finally drawn through the wound, removing the extravasated blood, when daylight could be seen through the hole. And yet SHIELDS to-day is a hale and hearty man, free from disease or any inconvenience from his wound, which was considered at the time as mortal, having been made by a large copper ball, and going directly through his body and lungs. For his gallant and meritorious conduct on this occasion, he was in August, 1848, breveted a Major-General of Volunteers. Still suffering from his wounds we find him commanding a brigade in the valley of Mexico, consisting of a battalion of marines and regiments composed of New York and South Carolina volunteers. He was also in the battle of Chapultepec, where, being unhorsed, he fought on foot, bareheaded and in his shirt sleeves, leading his brigade, sword in hand, with a bravery that has made his name remarkable in American history. He was again wounded, and that dangerously, but with care and a good constitution he recovered. His brigade, after performing various deeds, ending in the capture of the city of Mexico, was disbanded on the 20th of July, 1848. The war being ended, General SHIELDS laid down the sword, and assumed once more his place in civil life. He was brilliantly received on his arrival in the United States, and when he returned to the State of his choice (Illinois) he was elected to fill the position vacated by Mr. BREEZE—that of Senator from that State—to represent it in the Capitol at Washington. This was in the year 1849. Owing to some technicality he was refused admission as a Senator, when he promptly resigned the post, and was as promptly re-elected. He returned to Washington, and for six years proved himself to be as able in council as he was on the battle-field.

In 1855 he left the Senate, leaving at the same time Illinois, and went to settle on the lands awarded to him for his services in the army, which lands he had selected in the Territory of Minnesota. When that tract became a State General SHIELDS was returned to represent it in Congress as a Senator, and took his seat after its admission in May, 1858. General SHIELDS having drawn the short term, he had to vacate his seat in 1859, and, not securing a re-election, he went further west into California. From his retirement he was again brought out by the present war, having been appointed by Congress a Brigadier-General, with a commission dating from August 19, 1861.

This commission he at first declined, but, deeming it his duty to stand by his adopted country in her troubles, he came forth, and, after a long voyage, reached the capital, where (his name, in consequence of his refusal, having been stricken from the army list) he waited some time before he obtained a command. The lamented death of General LANDER left that Division without a head, and General SHIELDS was at once appointed to the command, with the rank of Brigadier-General, his division forming part of the corps d'armée of Major-General BANKS. He has again brought himself before the public by his gallant acts, has again been wounded upon the battle field, and once more our country rings with the name of "General SHIELDS."

General SHIELDS is of good personal appearance, about five feet eight inches in stature, with dark complexion. His style of speaking is easy, fluent and agreeable.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL T. W. SHERMAN.

General T. W. SHERMAN, commanding the land forces of the naval expedition, entered the army from the State of Rhode Island, and graduated in 1836, the eighteenth in his class. He was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Third Artillery on July 1, 1836, an Assistant Commissary of Subsistence in March, 1837, a First Lieutenant of Artillery in March, 1838, a Captain in May, 1846, and a Brevet Major in May, 1848, for "gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Buena Vista," on the 23d of February, 1847. In 1857, by his prudence and firmness, he prevented a war with certain of the Sioux Indians.

He has for years been in command of a battery of Light Artillery well known as SHERMAN'S Battery, and has always stood well in the estimation of the Army for his skill and attainments as an artilleryman. On the breaking out of the Rebellion, when the new regiments were authorized to be added to the Army he was appointed a Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fifth Artillery. His was among the first appointments of Brigadier-Generals of Volunteers, and soon after the battle of Bull Run he was assigned to the important duty of organizing the land forces of the present expedition.

The record of Gen. SHERMAN'S services is too fresh in the memory of the people to make necessary more than the above hasty recapitulation. The admirable manner in which he conducted the recent expedition proves his superior skill as a commander, and has received the enthusiastic praise of his fellow countrymen.

COLONEL JOHN W. GEARY.

Colonel JOHN W. GEARY, the commanding officer of the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment, is one of the most gallant and fearless officers in the United States service.

He commanded the Second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers in Mexico, and was noted for great firmness and the rigid discipline to which he subjected his men. When he first engaged in that war he was Lieutenant-Colonel of Colonel ROBERTS' regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, and, at the battle of Chapultepec, where he held chief command of his regiment, was wounded, but, notwithstanding, led his men in the terrific battle fought at the Belen gate just previous to the capture of the city of Mexico. For his gallantry on that occasion he was promoted to the rank of Colonel, his commission bearing date November 3d, 1847.—He received special mention at Cerro Gordo. After the war, in 1848, he lived in San Francisco, of which place he was appointed Postmaster, and was afterwards elected the first Mayor of the city, holding his office for two or three terms prior to the organization of the Vigilance Committee. In the latter part of July, 1856, he was appointed by Mr. BUCHANAN Governor of Kansas, and in a few days after was confirmed by a unanimous vote of the Senate. Early in the following September, he proceeded to take charge of the office to which he had been selected, and remained as Chief Executive of the Territory until March 4th, 1857, when he resigned. After his return home he retired to Westmoreland county, in this State, where he remained enjoying

Imports from foreign countries, will enable us to keep the balance of trade largely in our favor, as the average money value of all of the cotton which we have exported to all points for the last six years has only been about one hundred and fifty millions of dollars per annum. The chances of either France or England, under the present circumstances, pursuing such a line of policy as would stop the shipment of breadstuffs from this side, must therefore be remote; the want of cotton will give them trouble, but any step which would close our ports to the shipment of food to their laboring poor would cause an uprising which might bring another reign of terror to the

COLONEL JOHN W. GEARY.

Colonel JOHN W. GEARY, the commanding officer of the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment, is one of the most gallant and fearless officers in the United States service.

He commanded the Second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers in Mexico, and was noted for great firmness and the rigid discipline to which he subjected his men. When he first engaged in that war he was Lieutenant-Colonel of Colonel ROBERTS' regiment, and, at the battle of Chapultepec, where he held chief command of his regiment, was wounded, but, notwithstanding, led his men in the terrific battle fought at the Belen gate, just previous to the capture of the City of Mexico. For his gallantry on that occasion, he was promoted to the rank of Colonel, his commission bearing date November 3d, 1847.

He received special mention at Cerro Gordo. After the war, in 1848, he lived in San Francisco, of which place he was appointed Postmaster, and was afterwards elected the first Mayor of the city, holding his office for two or three terms prior to the organization of the Vigilance Committee. In the latter part of July, 1856, he was appointed by Mr. BUCHANAN Governor of Kansas, and in a few days after was confirmed by a unanimous vote of the Senate. Early in the following September, he proceeded to take charge of the office to which he had been selected, and remained as Chief Executive of the Territory until March 4th, 1857, when he resigned. After his return home he retired to Westmoreland county, in this State, where he remained enjoying the privacy of domestic life until the breaking out of the rebellion. His adventurous disposition then could not remain contented, and he came to Philadelphia to organize a regiment. Many of his old Mexican followers flocked to his standard from all parts of the State, and he has now one of the largest regiments in the United States service. Col. GEARY is a tall, powerful man, and of extraordinary military capacity.

Being connected with General BANKS' Division, he for a long time guarded the Upper Potomac, above the Point of Rocks, and upon several occasions afforded the Rebels an opportunity to judge of the accuracy of his guns.

When the order to advance was given, a few weeks since, the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment was the first to cross the Potomac, and thence, by hasty marches, scouring the country as they passed along, invaded the Rebel stronghold at Leesburg and occupied it.

The cry of "GEARY is coming" is sufficient to insure the speedy retreat of the Rebels, while the best officers in the service are unanimous in their praise of his ability and distinguished services.

His nomination to a Brigadier-Generalship has recently been mentioned in military circles.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1861.

GENERAL DAVID HUNTER.

General DAVID HUNTER was born in the District of Columbia, but was appointed from Illinois. He entered West Point as a cadet in 1818, and graduated in 1822, the twenty-fifth in rank in a class numbering forty members, and was appointed Second Lieutenant of the Fifth Infantry. He was promoted to the position of First Lieutenant June, 1828, and Captain First Dragoons, March, 1833. He resigned July 4, 1836. He again entered the army from Illinois, in November, 1841, as temporary Paymaster, and was appointed Paymaster, 14th March, 1842.

He accompanied Mr. LINCOLN from Springfield, on his tour to Washington, as far as Buffalo, where, owing to the pressure of the crowd he suffered a dislocation of the collar bone. Shortly after he was appointed Colonel of the Third Cavalry, and then Brigadier General. At the battle of Bull Run he acted as Major General in charge of the Third Division of the United States forces, and was wounded early in the day. General HUNTER has again been brought prominently before the country, by his appointment to succeed Major General FREMONT in Missouri. He is about sixty years of age.

COLONEL JAMES A. MULLIGAN.

Colonel JAMES A. MULLIGAN was born in the city of Utica, New York, in the year 1829, and is consequently in his thirty-second year. His parents were natives of Ireland. His mother, after the death of his father, which took place when he was a child, removed to Chicago, where she has resided with her son for the past twenty-three years. She married a respectable Irish-American in Chicago named MICHAEL LANTRY, who has steadily watched with a father's solicitude the expanding mind of the brave young soldier. He was educated at the Catholic College of North Chicago, under the superintendence of the Rev. Mr. KINSELLAR, now of New York city, and is a strict member of the Catholic Church. In 1852, 1853, and 1854 he read law in the office of the Hon. ISAAC N. ARNOLD, Congressman from the Chicago District. For a short time he edited the Western Tablet, a semi-religious weekly newspaper in Chicago. In 1856 he was admitted an attorney at law in Chicago. At this time he held the position of Second Lieutenant in the Chicago Shields Guards, one of the companies attached to the Irish Brigade now in Missouri, and which did so well at Lexington.

Colonel MULLIGAN is worthy of all praise.—A purer, better man does not live in the State of Illinois. Since he was able to tell the difference between ale and water a glass of spirituous or malt liquor has not passed his lips. He is a rigid temperance man, although he is jovial and whole-souled to a fault. He is six feet three inches in height, with a wiry, elastic frame, a large, lustrous, hazel eye, an open, frank, Celtic face, stamped with courage, pluck, and independence, surmounted with a bushy profusion of hair, tintured with grey. Honorable in all relations, respected by all, he has won his way by untiring industry and unquestionable courage.—On the 26th of October, 1859, he was married to Miss MARIAN NUGENT by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Chicago.

In the winter of 1857 Senator FITCH, of Indiana, tendered him a clerkship in the Department of the Interior. He accepted of the position and spent the winter at Washington. During his residence in Washington he corresponded with the Utica Telegraph, over the nomme de plume of "Satan." After his return to Chicago from Washington, he was elected Captain of the Shields Guards. On the news arriving of the bombardment of Fort Sumter, the Irish-American companies held a meeting, of which he was chairman, and soon afterwards he went to Washington with a letter, written by the late Senator DOUGLAS on his death-bed, to the President, tendering a regiment to be called the "Irish Brigade." It was accepted, and, being elected Colonel, the brave MULLIGAN immediately went to work with a will. His regiment was rapidly organized, and from that time until the compulsory surrender of Lexington, after a protracted siege, the course of the organization is well known.
